BIBLICAL LAND LAWS AND THE NEW PALESTINE

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

According to biblical land laws found in the book of Leviticus, in the Jubilee year, which was the fiftieth year, all the land was to revert to its original possessors. This meant that the land apportioned fairly to each family on the conquest of Palestine was to remain the perpetual property of that family. The prophetic spirits, who phrased this Utopian legislation, sought to prevent all those evils which follow in the wake of the unequitable distribution of land. Large landed estates, with many feudal serfs, the expropriation of the masses and the wealth of the few absentee landlords, were conditions which these far-sighted dreamers wanted to avoid. Whether their theories were ever put into practice in ancient Palestine is not known. The available evidence points to the contrary.

But it is indeed the miracle of miracles, that the land scheme of these idealists is being put in practice in the New Palestine to-day. All land in land settlements created by the Zionist organizations is but leased to the tenants for a period of fifty years. These colonists own some of the land. They cannot sell or dispose of it. It is theirs as long as they work it. The title of the land is held by the Jewish National Fund and will forever remain the property of the Jewish people. No profiteering in land, no speculation in rents, but the just and noble ideal of the prophets is to regulate the tenure of land in Palestine. I know of no finer tribute to the Jewish National Fund than the fact that it is making real an old Jewish ideal.

"PREACHER! STICK TO YOUR TEXTS!"

The recent election campaign, which has now become history, was distinguished by the very active part which the churches and their leaders played in it, and the question has again been raised as to the appropriateness of having ministers participate in politics. Men who used their pulpits to attack the proposals of Premier Ferguson were lampooned in the press and abused from many platforms. Many people resented the ministers' meddling with secular affairs, and the cries were frequently heard: "Preacher, stick to your texts!" As for me, I rejoice in the fact that ministers have realized the full power and value of the pulpit. Too long has the church been accused of dabbling and dealing in glittering generalities, and speaking of great ideals in a nebulous way, and when a serious crisis arose, which demanded that these ideals be applied, the church was not there to insist that they be applied. A happy day for religion it is when ministers leave the field of theory and urge the application of the religious theory to life. "Stick to your texts" is the cry, but texts have vital, modern and even radical implications. The minister who sticks to his text will not refuse the challenge of their implications.

The pulpit is one of the great agencies for the formulation of public opinion. Shall that agency be silent in time of crisis? Shall it not be more bold and outspoken then, than it is normally? Those ministers who felt that the recent election brought a moral challenge to the public are to be commended rather than condemned for having

THE NATIONAL FUND—A SYMBOL OF JEWISH NATIONAL UNITY

Jewry is this month celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the institution of the Jewish National Fund.

In its practical significance the National Fund is a strictly Zionist instrument. Its resources are employed chiefly in acquiring title to land in Palestine, the ownership vesting in the people as a whole. Its immediate object is to redeem as much of the soil of Palestine as possible.

Working from a Zionist premise it is reasonable to identify the available collective resources of the Jewish people with what may be regarded as the ultimate criterion of value for the Jews, as a people—the soil in the holy land. Palestine is the source of Jewish life and creativeness. It is the basis on which rests the burden of the meaning of Jewish existence. It therefore stands out as the natural repository of the people's offerings to their national ideal.

The National Fund, however, can be more than a mere Zionist instrument. It can be the symbol of the unity of the Jewish people. Owing to its origination in a Zionist atmosphere it bears the mark of a Zionist institution. But it is capable of wider application in Jewish life. The National Fund, if it were only as rich in resources as it is in suggestiveness, could be the great central fund for all Jewish needs of national import. Jewish life derives its basic harmony from the Zionist motif. But it has many phases of general concern which are not directly bound up with the Zionist endeavour. There might be a central Jewish fund serving all the aspects of the widely ramified Jewish interests.

In the sphere of Zionism the National Fund stands forth as the most beautifully simple and fascinating of Jewish achievements. It represents the elementary idea of a concentrated national endeavour. And the work which it does of redeeming Palestine soil for the Jewish people, at once appeals to the sense of the romantic and operates with the most far-reaching reality in Jewish life.

Toronto Jewry will have occasion to celebrate the event fittingly this coming Sunday when it will have as its guest Louis Lipsky, President of the American Federation of Zionists.

PROF. GETZEL ZELIKOWITCH

American Jewish life has this week lost another of its outstanding literary personalities. Professor Getzel Zalikowitch, Hebraist, poet, Orientalist, Egyptologist, Jewish publicist, was one of the most picturesque of the older school of Jewish writers whose ranks are being continuously thinned.

Zelikowitch, early in his youth as a Talmudic student in a small town in Russia, gained a reputation as a prodigy. In his later life he travelled a great deal in the Orient and went through some thrilling adventures. He learned the Oriental languages and became an authority in this field. Shortly after he came to America he was given the chair of Oriental languages in Pennsylvania University.

After a brief career in academic life, Zelikowitch turned to Yiddish

Which Are You?

THERE are two kinds of people in the world—the ones who act first and think afterwards, and those who think first and act accordingly. These two classes of people constitute also the two kinds of buyers—those who spend their money first and then count their purchases, and those who first count their needs and then buy to make their money cover them. To the latter class belong those who read ADVERTISING. There is no end to spending money economically comparable to looking carefully through the advertising columns of the newspaper for buying ideas, not only where price is concerned, but as to what finds favor in style and quality. Belong, therefore, not to the class that spend at random until they have said good-bye to their last dollar without reaching the end of their buying line. Belong rather to that wise body of people who first make a note of their needs and then consult the advertising columns to find how those needs can be most satisfactorily covered by the family purse. The BEST MERCHANTS in the city advertise their wares in the REVIEW. Consult CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW ADVERTISEMENTS for valuable style and price information.

WEDDINGS

Marks—Fineberg

The marriage of Sadye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Fineberg, to Bernard Marks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Marks, took place at the Windsor Hotel, Wednesday, November 24, at 7 o'clock, with Dr. Abramowitz officiating, assisted by Rev. De La Penha and Rabbi Hirsch Cohen, grand-uncle of the bride. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of mousseline de soie with inserts of real French lace. Her train was of mousseline de soie with inserts of lace and the veil was arranged in Grecian effect with a head-dress of real Brussels lace. White satin pumps completed her costume and she carried a sheaf of lillies. The maid-of-honour, Miss Eileen Fineberg, sister of the bride, wore a bouffante gown of peach colour moire with tulle skirt, and carried a sheaf of Premier roses. The bridesmaids were: Misses Hattie Adelstein, in a period gown of shaded tulle over peach colour taffeta; Libbie Adelstein, period gown of yellow taffeta and tulle; Anne Marks, bouffante frock of yellow chiffon over green, combined with coloured Chantilly lace; Marjorie Freedman, flesh colour chiffon with inserts of Chantilly lace; Kate Wilensky, bouffante frock of green panne velvet and georgette crepe. All wore large picture hats of tulle and chiffon ribbon and carried sheafs of Columbia roses. Lionel Rose was best man, and the ushers were Arnold Fineberg, Lawrence Marks and Cecil Slaremsky. Mrs. Fineberg, mother of the bride, wore a French gown of black chiffon over flesh with inserts of Chantilly lace, a black satin hat with black Chantilly lace and a corsage of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Marks, mother of the groom, wore a gown of black silk, the top of real lace, with a thin gold thread, the skirt of gold lace trimmed with mousselaine de soie. She also wore a black satin hat and corsage of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. The wedding march was played by Miss Hilda Blumer and Brian Rose. During the signing of the register Mrs. Joseph Glickman sang, "Oh Promise Me." A dinner was served to 300 guests. Guests from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. David Kahn, Miss Esther Fagan of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Max Frances, of Toronto; Mrs. I. Slonimsky and Miss Mary and Cecil Slonimsky, Mrs. A. Gould, Miss Pauline Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Davis, all of Ottawa. The groom's gifts to the bridal attendants were: to the maid-of-honour a silver beaded bag; to the bridesmaids novelty bracelets; to the best man, a silver flask; to the ushers, pipes; and to Mrs. Joseph Glickman and Miss Hilda Blumer, silver vanity cases. Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Marks will spend their honeymoon in New York, Atlantic City, Baltimore and Washington, and will live in the Ambassador Apartments, Westmount.

Steinberg—Glickman

The marriage was solemnized, in Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, at 5 o'clock, Tuesday, November 23, of Birdie [illegible] Glickman, Redfern Avenue, to Jack G. Steinberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Steinberg. Dr. H. Abramowitz, assisted by Cantor [illegible] officiated. The synagogue was decorated with smilax, yellow chrysanthemums and pom-poms. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of Elizabeth crepe and silver lace, embroidered with crystal beads and rhinestones. The train, of similar material, fell in V-shape from the shoulders to the waistline, forming a court-train, which was edged in silver lace and embroidered in crystal beads and rhinestones. The veil was draped and mounted in Grecian style. The bride carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. The bride was attended by Mrs. Adolphe Gardner, matron-of-honour, in a gown of powder blue mousseline de soie, made in bouffante style, who carried a bouquet of Pernet roses. The bridesmaids were Misses Gertrude and Laura Glickman, sisters of the bride; Jeanette Steinberg, sister of the groom, and Miriam Issenman, who were dressed in pink georgette, embroidered with sequins and beads. All attendants wore hats to match their gowns and carried bouquets of Columbia roses. The mother of the bride wore a gown of black crepe Madeleine over silver cloth, embroidered with petals and leaves of Saloma velvet with platinum beads. The mother of the groom wore a gown of black beads and sequins, and both carried bouquets of Crusader roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Alexander Steinberg, as best man, with David Steinberg, Herbert Glickman, Charles Blumer and Norman Glickman as groomsmen. Harry Edelstone and Adolphe Gardner were ushers. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond and platinum wrist-watch; to the matron of honour and bridesmaids, French beaded bags; to the best man, a gold watch-chain; to the groomsmen, gold dress sets, and to the ushers, silver-mounted canes. A reception was held in the assembly hall of the synagogue. The honeymoon will be spent in New York and Atlantic City. Mr. and Mrs. Steinberg will live at 443 Elm Avenue, Westmount.

Michaels—Dean

The marriage of Miss Edith Dean, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Dean, Mont Royal, Caithness Drive, New Brighton, to Samuel Michaels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Michaels, of Montreal, was solemnized Wednesday, October 20, at Egremont Synagogue, Falkland Road, Rabbi Levy and the Rev. A. Coleman officiating. The bride was given away by her father and mother; and the bridegroom by his mother and brother. The bride wore a gown of ivory marocain with diamente cut into the material and a silver lace train, lined and ruched with pink georgette with sprays of orange blossoms at the corner. Her veil of net with silver embroidery was caught by a crown of pearls and her bouquet was of tea roses. There were six bridesmaids in gowns in petal design of pink georgette trimmed with silver lace and georgette flowers with silver lace hats to match, who carried bouquets of Victoria posies. Mrs. W. Dean, mother of the bride, was gowned in old gold satin with gold lace panniers with hat to match. Her bouquet was of red roses. Mrs. S. Michaels, mother of the groom, wore a beige georgette frock, embroidered, with a hat to match. Samuel Dean, brother of the bride, was best man. A reception and dinner at the Town Hall followed and a dance was held at night. The honeymoon is being spent on the continent. The bride travelled in a fawn georgette costume and mink fur coat with toque.

Well, by some unknown force the hook has been introduced between the scenes, and Queen Marie has been dragged off the American stage to her home, closely guarded to the last by a vigilant bomb squad. There was the kind of trouble in Chicago that a Queen has to pretend not to see and, with Cleveland still to be heard from, it was perhaps deemed wise to follow the suggestion of the European press and call it a stay. Not that the Jews caused any trouble. They were just lovely from the start. Immediately on the Queen's arrival the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods sent her a message of welcome and appreciation of her "personal endeavours to alleviate human suffering in her country." Editors of all the English-Jewish papers which stack this exchange table were very mealy-mouthed, some of them being of the clergy with a doctrine of humility to keep polished up. Very few Jews invited to do the Queen honour were so heavy-hearted that they couldn't oblige a lady who loves crowds. Some Canadian Jews helped to make the Queen happy, unable as they are to be rude under any circumstances. (But all that has been covered thoroughly of course, and no subscriptions cancelled.)

Before the Queen set sail for America, she wrote in one of her syndicated chapters the following description of her "ideal man": "Strong, silent, honourable. . . . I want to ride through the great waste spaces with him. . . . I want to share his tent, his fire, his food. . . . I want to lean my head on his shoulder and hear his strong, faithful heart beat. . . . I want the delicious old-fashioned thrill of being mastered and overruled. . . . But I have never met my man of the great wastes, my pioneer."

Funny the Roumanian Jews advanced no candidate.

"I have never cared whether I was mentioned, praised or blamed; I knew very well that my paper would have to be simple and popular for I wanted to write for the people. This would not give scholars any reason for particular admiration. It was very hard to obtain readers. No one was used to reading a Jewish paper. I received frequently communications of the following import from the country: 'We are not Jews. We do not need a Jewish paper. We do not wish to be known as Jews. There is no honour in being a Jew. I have nothing to do with Jews.' Frivolity and indifference were the order of the day, and in the cities atheism and hatred of all religion were rampant among the Germans. The mass was large and unapproachable and my arguments were slow in convincing a foolish, misguided and semi-cultured class of people who repeat, parrot-like, whatever happens to be the fad of the hour. It came to pass that every pastor, every common jester and every political rogue rained blows upon the Talmud and the Jews. A rascally Jew figured in every cheap novel, every newspaper printed some stale jokes about the Jews, and all this called forth not one word of protest. I proceeded against these things maliciously, wrote articles filled with fire and brimstone instead of with polite and becoming words. I did not mind the abuse to which I was subjected. I struck right and left so violently that the sparks flew in all directions and used both fists on the principle of 'two kicks for one blow.' I silenced the opposition; the cowards threw off their disguise and were no longer afraid to be Jews; the much-decried Wise became all at once a mighty personage, and the Israelite became known and recognized as the organ of all Jewry." From "Reminiscences" written in 1846 by Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, founder of the American Israelite and Hebrew Union College.

Too many parents tie up the dog at night and turn the boy loose to run at will. Too many woodsheds have been converted into garages. Too many half-time parents; parents who take the "easiest way," who give the boy a curt word or two, a five or ten dollar bill to appease his feelings and the use of the car to run hither and thither. Too many parents who do not care whether or not he is at school or church as long as he is out of their sight. Too many parents who are more concerned about dollars and cents than about the moral welfare of their own sons. Too many parents who leave all the religious instruction of their own children to Sunday School teachers and pastors. Too many parents who are afraid to discuss the vital things of life with their own children. Too many parents who are ready to blame other people's children for leading theirs astray. In short we are suffering from too many part-time parents. Fully fifty P cent. of our problem cases show one or both of the parents out of th home or off the job.—From a report of the Big Brother Movemen

JEWS COMPRISE A THIRD OF NEW YORK

One of every three persons living in New York City is a Jew. That is, approximately, the conclusion obtained by comparing an official estimate of the city's entire population with the results of a survey just completed by Israel Chipkin, educational director of the Jewish Education Association.

According to these figures, the present Jewish population of New York City is 1,750,000. It has increased about 250,000 in the last decade. The United States Bureau of Census estimated the total population of the city, July 1, 1926, as 5,924,000.

Forty-five per cent. of the Jews in the city now live in Brooklyn, constituting forty-three per cent. of the total population of that borough.

In the last five years there has been a marked movement of Jewish population out of Manhattan, into Brooklyn and the Bronx chiefly, the report shows. Fifty-two per cent. of the population of the Bronx is Jewish, but the percentage of Jews of the city living there is only twenty-two, or about half as many as in Brooklyn.

In sixteen years the number of children of school age has grown from 300,000 to 350,000, and is now about thirty-eight per cent. of the child population of New York.

The report summarizes the situation thus:

"According to figures reported for several years it appears that the Jewish population has moved out of the lower east side, central east side, lower west side, Yorkville and Harlem in large numbers. It is decreasing gradually in the South Bronx, Lower Central Bronx and the Brownsville, Williamsburg and Willoughby sections of Brooklyn.

"It appears to be stationary in the west side, west Harlem, Washington Heights and Tremont section of the Bronx, Bushwick, Ridgewood and Greenpoint sections of Brooklyn, and the entire borough of Richmond.

"Jewish population is increasing slowly in North Bronx, East New York, Borough Park, Bensonhurst, South Brooklyn, Bay Ridge, Fort Hamilton and the Borough of Queens, and is increasing rapidly in the Upper Central Bronx and Grand Concourse sections, and in the Eastern Parkway, Flatbush and Coney Island sections of Brooklyn."

Maurice H. Goldblatt, a Chicago art critic, has just returned from Europe, saying he had identified fifty-three paintings in the European galleries listed as the work of Leonardo da Vinci and other old masters as the work of Andrea Salaino, the pupil of Da Vinci. Some of those he said he had identified were the "Bacchus" and the "Madonna and Child" in the Louvre.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

If you are, this laundry isn't

If you are one of the few who send everything to the laundry to be completely finished—then this laundry is not for you. As our name implies, we do not completely finish all "family wash." In our semi-finished work, we completely finish all the flatwork and body clothes, leaving just the odd corner for you to smooth out with your own iron. Our four other services are graded down through various lesser stages of completion to simple "wet wash" and are priced accordingly. Have a chat with our young lady on your phone about your bundle of family wash.

literature. When he started writing for the American Yiddish press some thirty-five years ago the Yiddish language was still in the stage of a crude jargon without any definite laws of syntax, or even an accepted orthography. Zelikowitch, recognized as an accomplished stylist in Hebrew, undertook to mould the Yiddish tongue into a modern language. And the growth and development of Yiddish in America were in no small measure due to the guiding influence of Zelikowitch.

In recent years Zelikowitch, though one of the editors of the "Tageblatt" and a frequent contributor, ceased to exert any considerable influence on the trend of Jewish life. A man of exceptional erudition, he lost touch with modern tendencies, and his value was mainly of an antiquarian nature. Still his display of diversified knowledge intrigued many of his readers of the older school and won their admiration and loyalty. His weekly column in the "Tageblatt" entitled "Literature and Lore," dealing with Hebrew and Talmudic literature, displaying an encyclopaedic range of knowledge, was the wonder of his readers. It was pathetic to receive on Monday morning the Friday issue of the "Tageblatt" containing his last article in his famous department, and read, at the same time in the local press of his death.

Zelikowitch was an ardent Zionist and exponent of traditional Judaism. He has left a vast host of readers and admirers to mourn his death.

Is the minister taking unfair advantage when he uses his pulpit in controversial matters? The occupancy of the pulpit is one of his greatest privileges. Because of his position, his training and character, he is entrusted by [illegible] to lead and to guide the congregation, gives him a [illegible] which and to propagate ideas [illegible]. That platform gives him an [illegible] and it is intended that that be [illegible] which the minister has [illegible]. The fruits of his studies and [illegible] thus be more readily disseminated. Surely then, in a crisis, it is the minister's duty to speak out from his vantage point for the cause he feels right.

But this the minister as well as the congregation should always bear in mind—that the minister's word [illegible] a decree like that of the Medes and Persians, which must be obeyed. The minister's word should [illegible] no more authority than that of any other intelligent and thoughtful citizen. But [illegible] he should always have the right to [illegible] those him. The pulpit [illegible] be [illegible], need not [illegible] to [illegible] issues. It should [illegible] in [illegible] matter and attempt to mould public opinion, but it should always be fair, considerate, courteous and sure of its ground.

JUNIOR HADASSAH

Miss Miriam Wolfson entertained at the tea hour Sunday last for the conveners and assistants of the Junior Hadassah programme. The home was decorated with chrysanthemums and snapdragons, and the tea table was centred with carnations and [illegible] candles. The guests were received by Misses Miriam and Eleanor Wolfson. Miss Molley Weisdorf poured tea, and assisting at the tea table were Misses Queenie Loveguard and Ruth Cohen. Among those present were Misses Florence Peltz, Anne Black, [illegible] Levy, Gertrude Adler, Dorothy Steinhardt, Shirley Levinson, Grace Richmond, Anne Blyestiff, Ida and Bertha Raahkofsky, Sarah Stork, Betty Hirtz, Ethel Cohen, Sophie Zweig, Rose Oster, Esther Sherman and Myrtle Wood.

An executive meeting was held at the home of Miss Miriam Wolfson, 99 Bloor Street West, Wednesday, December 1, to discuss the theatre night, Tuesday, December 7, at Hart House Theatre.

Appointed Honorary Consul

Following the decision of the Government of the Czecho-Slovak Republic (due to the increased importance of trade relations between the Republic and Canada, and the influx of Czecho-Slovak immigrants to the Dominion), to establish a consulate in Winnipeg, Max Steinkopf, of Winnipeg, has been appointed honorary consul, with jurisdiction in the Prairie Provinces and British Columbia. Mr. Steinkopf is on the Council of the Winnipeg General Hospital, Children's Hospital, of Winnipeg, a member of the Greater Winnipeg District Council of the Boy Scout Movement, Canadian chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of the Bnai Brith, Canadian vice-chairman of the Jewish European Orphans' committee, and treasurer of the Archaeological Society of America. He was chairman of the Jewish War Relief in Canada, and is vice-chairman of the two million dollar drive now in progress in connection with the Bnai Brith Wider Scope Committee. Mr. Steinkopf is a native of Prague, Austria, and came to Canada with his parents at an early age. He was educated at the public school, Morden, Manitoba, and entered the University of Manitoba, being then the only Jewish student enrolled.

Dr. Arthur A. Feldman

who served Jewish knowledge in Germany and Western Hungary for more than 250 years. He was born in Galanta, a small Hungarian town near Vienna. His grandfather, Simon Friedman, author of a commentary to the Talmud, was rabbi there, and was succeeded by Dr. Feldman's father, Rabbi Moses Feldman, one of the greatest Talmudical authorities of Middle Europe who is now president of the rabbinate of the Budapest Kultusgemeinde. Until his seventeenth year of age the Hamilton rabbi studied in Yeshivoth. Then he made the eight grades of High School in three years and entered the Jewish Theological Seminary in Budapest where he was ordained rabbi by Dr. Wilhelm Bacher, the world-famous scholar, president of the seminary. He attended the universities of Berlin, Vienna and Budapest. From the latter, Dr. Feldman received his Ph.D. For one year he was rabbi in Pancova, and for ten years one of the rabbis of the Kultusgemeinde in Budapest. He came to the United States in August, 1923, and spent one year in Pittsburgh where he attended the university and was connected with the Tree of Life Congregation. For two years he was rabbi of Temple Israel, Lafayette, Ind. Since last September the rabbi has been leader of the Anshe Sholem Congregation, Hamilton. He is the author of a book, "A Comparison of the Mechiltas of Rabbi Akiba and Rabbi Ishmael," and of numerous articles published in German, Hungarian and English papers.

Old Iron

By GEORGE COHEN

For the twenty-thirty years a stream of machinery had been pouring into the country surrounding Lincoln. Every other spring or summer saw a new plow, mower or reaper go into the field while the [illegible] in the implement shed against an emergency. But no [illegible] arose. Each new machine [illegible] that the preceding. The old plows and mowers and reapers were left undisturbed while the farmer kept on buying the latest models. Time [illegible] became crowded. The old [illegible] was no more [illegible] the farmer would take his machinery to the "place." From the implement shed the old machines [illegible] given a final inspection [illegible] to an out-of-the-way [illegible] of the barn.

In the [illegible] new ranges were being installed. Nice and large these ranges were, with hot water boilers [illegible] Out came the [illegible] stoves of an early date [illegible] but they, too, were not at once discarded. They were kept about the yard, covered with a strip of old carpet. Suppose something proved to be the matter with the range. Nothing, however, was the matter with the range, and after some months the stove joined the company of the sixty old plows and reapers.

The windmill came, towering high over the well, and the old pump was discarded. It lay about the yard until a chicken cut its wing against its jagged edges, or a child its foot, and then the old pump, too, was consigned to the scrap heap back of the barn.

There these derelict machines and out-of-date implements lay year after year, thick with rust. Snow covered them in winter. In the summer, grass grew high above them.

An oddly thrown together one-horse rig drew up in the road alongside the farm. A man alighted and, in an alien accent inquired: "Is there any old iron for sale?" He was buying old iron.

A peddler, then, and a new variety; one that had nothing to sell, but instead was buying old iron. The farmer regarded the man and beast curiously.

Of the two, the horse had the patriarchal look. It was big, old and bony. It was standing on three feet, resting its fourth, spavined leg. The horse turned its head to one side and then to the other, gazing quizzically at the heavy, unaccustomed shafts, the ill-fitting harness and the strange contraption of a wagon, with rattling box and broad sideboards. The droop of the animal's lower lip betokened a ripe experience, which, on this occasion at least, seemed not unmixed with stoicism against whatever other indignities fate might choose to heap upon it.

If the man had any dignity, it was secreted underneath a shabby exterior. He moved about with a jerky quickness with his full beard, and the lines of age and thought in his face. His eyes were alert, expectant, his every muscle tense and vibrant, as if at any moment fortune might touch him by the forelock and he did not intend to be caught unaware.

"Old iron," the peddler repeated. He was paying cash for old iron.

The farmer "guessed" there might be some old iron about the place. There were a couple of old mowers back of the barn; there was also a binder that was of no account, and a disk plow. Did the peddler want these?

"Binder, mowers, disk plow." The peddler was listening open-mouthed. His stock of English did not extend to these. He was only six months out of Russia, and five and a half of these were spent in a steamship on the way to New York. He had been in America a week, and if [illegible] his [illegible]

"Old iron." The man's voice sounded uncertain now, and his eyes darted from place to place as if in search of something wherewith to make himself understood, to supplement his meager stock of English phrases.

The farmer, surmising his predicament, led the way to the barn. Here he spread apart the weeds and the rusty, old implements became visible. The peddler's face and eyes underwent an instantaneous transformation. Yes, that was old iron—how much?

The farmer was staring at the peddler. The man's excitement, his enthusiasm over the scrapped machinery, was amusing—and uncomfortable. He did not answer at once.

The peddler reiterated: "How much?"

"Oh, anything." The farmer dismissed the matter. The stuff was of no consequence to him; was merely cluttering up the yard.

"Two dollars."

The farmer nodded assent and the peddler brought his rig around. He pounded at the joints of the machines with a sledge hammer until they came apart, and lifted the pieces into the wagon. The farmer stood nearby and now and then lent a hand.

When the last scraps had been cleared away and the peddler stood mopping his face and neck, the farmer glanced at the wagon and suggested: "That's a pretty big load for one horse." Perhaps the peddler did not grasp the farmer's remark, perhaps he did not quite know how to meet it. With a last look around to make sure he had left nothing behind, the peddler climbed to his seat, uttered a hasty good-bye and pulled the reins. The horse strained against the collar and started off. It was indeed a heavy load for one horse.

The farmer followed the rig with his eyes until it was in the main road; then he turned and walked toward the house in an odd humour. The brief episode with the peddler had stirred unwonted thoughts in him. What a horse! What a wagon! How eager the peddler had been about this bit of old iron. The man plainly was in dire need.

What poor people there were in the world! His own security and well-being burst upon the farmer with a sudden warmth and content.

In his seat on the wagon the peddler too was in an exultant humour. He let the horse plod along undisturbed, at the pace the animal chose while he went on thinking and figuring in a foreign tongue.

Yes, he had all of a ton of iron there and it would bring him eight dollars. He had paid for it two, and there would be a dollar in expenses for himself and the horse. That would leave him five dollars clear. He had earned five dollars that day. Five dollars.

A few weeks earlier he would have calculated his earnings in terms of roubles. Five dollars was ten roubles in Russia. But he had a different way of figuring his earnings now. He was figuring in terms of steamship tickets. A steerage ticket from Hamburg to New York cost thirty dollars. He had earned one-sixth of a ticket that day. One-sixth of a steamship ticket!

He figured some more, added, subtracted, made allowances. There was five dollars a day here and a wife and five children in Russia. With God's help his family should be in America in two years.

In two years! With God's help—his family. And so on and on the peddler figured and mused, mused and figured.

Stores and factories were closed and there were few persons on the streets at the time the peddler reached Lincoln. Through the raised windows one caught a glimpse of families sitting [illegible] supper. Here and there the odor of fresh corn bread was wafted through the air, and man and beast gave an involuntary start. The peddler tugged at the reins and the horse strained forward with a desperate violence only to relapse into the usual trot again a moment later. Halfway through the town the peddler turned off into a section known as Locust Field.

Locust Field was a marshy stretch on the west side of Lincoln running close to the railroad tracks. It had a few odds and ends of streets with two or three dozen houses on them. The streets were not paved and there were no sidewalks, except what the tenants themselves chose to lay in order to facilitate the approach to their homes on rainy days.

In the small hunched dwellings lived street cleaners, watchmen, railroad workers. There were several boarding houses in the district which were noted for the amount of drinking done in them. Once or twice a year, when a robbery had occurred or the railroad company's warehouse had been broken into, the police would come down to Locust Field to interview certain of its residents.

Every house in the neighbourhood had a barn and some of these stood vacant. One such barn the peddler had rented. He drove into the yard, unhitched the horse and put it up in the stable. With the horse attended to, the peddler got on the wagon and began to unload it.

As the chunks of machinery clanked against each other, a number of children came up from the neighbouring houses and stood gazing at the bearded figure on the wagon. They were joined by some older boys and several adults. Of the latter, one man stepped up close to the wagon and entered into conversation with the peddler—that is, the man did the talking while the peddler stopped in his work now and then to answer "Yes" or "No."

"From Chicago?" the man queried.

"From New York," the peddler answered, and surveyed the crowd at the gate with apprehension.

"From New York," the man repeated. "You came all the way from New York?"

"Yes."

The peddler had no idea who the man speaking to him was. For all he knew, the man might be an official of some sort—American officials had a way of dressing like plain citizens—and the peddler wanted him on the good side. He wanted everyone on the good side.

The man however,, was no official. He was Michael Brenecke, a character well known about Lincoln's saloons and stables. In the stables he worked and in the saloons he drank away his earnings. Prior to his coming to Lincoln, Brenecke had been employed in a stable in Chicago. He never missed an occasion to display his knowledge of the world and of people.

"Jew?" Brenecke asked.

"Jew," the peddler affirmed.

With that the stable man's stock of questions seemed to have become exhausted. Brenecke surveyed the pile of iron on the ground and retreated back to the crowd.

"There's money in that," he said, with a knowing squint to the men and to two or three of the older boys. "I had a friend in Chicago in the junk business once. He is a rich man now. Maybe I'll go into it myself some day. Maybe I will—yet."

Brenecke walked on and the small crowd soon dwindled away. The peddler, having finished his day's work, started for his boarding place, a block away, where his supper would be warmed over for him.

Winter came. In December the first big snowstorm swept the country, for a week the peddler was unable to venture out of the city. He stayed in the house and wrote letters. Cousins in New York, a brother-in-law in Boston, an Uncle in Baltimore had long been waiting to hear from him.

There was no end of old iron in the country, he wrote, and the people were kind to the stranger in their midst. They were selling their old iron to the foreigner at his own price. Some declined to take money for it altogether—they gave it away. Never yet had he been denied a meal at mid-day or shelter at night.

He had another five days of enforced idleness in January, a blizzard this time. But it was just as well. The peddler by now had a stack of correspondence to answer. Specific questions were asked. He answered accordingly. Yes, he affirmed, he was making five dollars a day, more at times. The old iron was turning to gold. And there was room for others, for many others. The country was vast. They were to let him know in advance when they were coming.

The uncle from Baltimore was the first to arrive. He was an old man and brought his two grown sons with him. The cousins and the brother-in-law followed.

In the next few days the blacksmiths in the vicinity of Locust Field were kept busy refitting old vehicles. The neighbouring stables were combed for horses that were old enough to be cheap, but not too old to work. The demand for second-hand harness, too, had reached a high water mark, and empty barns had become scarce in Locust Field.

The Romance of Hebrew Printing

By ELKAN NATHAN ADLER

Throughout the middle ages, the Jews were practically alone in Europe to uphold science and literature. No doubt from time to time they were oppressed by robber barons, or harassed by the ignorant masses, but they were treated on terms of intellectual equality and friendship by all that was highest and best among the Gentiles. Every king had his Jewish doctor, and every studious monk his Jewish intimus, a living mine, from which he could extract sparkling bits of ore with which to shine in the pulpit. Even Dante is said to have had his Jewish friend. The fifteenth century ended in the expulsion of the Jews from Spain and Portugal, and a great change in their condition, but the expulsion took place after what was the greatest event of the century. This was not the discovery of a new world, although that was important enough. It was the discovery of printing. One of the mysteries of history, a mystery not yet solved, is as to the part the Jews played in that great discovery. They certainly did play a part in it. The first printed book recorded is Gutenberg's Bible, printed at Mainz about 1450. Mainz was sacked about 1462, and many printers' employees were thrown out of work and migrated to Italy and elsewhere. The first book printed in Italy appeared in Rome in 1467. Before the end of the fifteenth century, we know of at least one hundred Hebrew books printed by Jewish printers.

From various indications and especially from printed fragments found in the famous Cairo Genizah, we are certain that there must have been many more books than the round hundred printed in the fifteenth century. Fatally, the early printer retained the mediæval habit of the scribe and [illegible] his work [illegible] tails. From these we can learn many things as to Jewish printing. One of the synonyms for a printer is "who writes at once with many pens, and yet no miracle be done." This is an allusion to a curious passage in the Talmud, fama, 36b, which has by some authorities been taken to prove that the rabbis anticipated the invention of printing. "Ben Quinear would not teach the art of writing. They say of him that he took four pens between his fingers and when a word had four letters, wrote it all at once."

In the fifteenth century there were sixty printers in Central and Northern Europe, twenty-one in the Netherlands, thirty-two in Italy, thirty-one in France and twenty-two in Spain and Portugal. Of a few incunables, notably the magnificent Semag printed before 1480, we know neither date, place nor printer; the water mark, a curious crossbow, and the style and get-up, however, point to Italy. In Spain, between 1475 and 1492, we know of five printers in three cities, viz., Solomon Ibn Alkabiz, Eliezer Alantansi, Immanuel, Samuel b. Musa, and Solomon Salmati b. Maimon, at Guadalajara, Ixar and Zamora. In Portugal there were four Jewish printers in three cities, viz. Samuel Gacon, Abraham d'Ortas, Eliezer Toledano and Alantansi at Faro, Leiria and Lisbon. Ortas printed as late as 1496, and we know of at least one book not in Hebrew printed by him, which played a part in the history of the world. This was the "Almanach Perpetuum" of Abraham Zacuto, printed by Meyerling Ortas at Leiria in 1496.

Of this exceedingly rare work, Graesse states that the only copy known was in the Royal Library of Lisbon, but within the last few years another copy has been discovered in the University

[illegible] Frankfurt City library, where he lectured. [illegible] being "that a copy was offered for sale by [illegible] for fifteen hundred [illegible] says [illegible] of Columbus," that Columbus used to predict the eclipse of the moon, which so terrified [illegible] Jamaica that they [illegible] and furnished him with food." It is a surviving [illegible] part the Jews played in the discovery of America.

[illegible] for the Hebrew press, and for some years were the great rivals of the Soncinos. They too, [illegible] and came from Speyer, near Mainz, and the first of their long line may have been a pupil of Gutenberg himself. Several books have been written about their achievements. The best of them seems to be Marx's. One of the family, Jerome Concino, was converted to Christianity, and, like most converts, became a rabid anti-Semite. "Anti-Judaici ex Judaei." His Petrarch of 1503, in italic type, is dedicated to Caesar Borgia. In the dedication he explains why he set up his press at Fano, and tells how he had thither attracted "un nobilissimo sculptore de littere latine, grece et hebraice, chiamato M. Francesco de Bologna." From this we may infer that some, at least, of the beautiful Hebrew types of the Soncinos were cut by the famous painter, Francia. I possess Jerome Soncino's edition of Galatinus, printed at Ortona in 1518, which was the first book printed in that city. The book has three hundred leaves folio, in which it seeks to establish the truth of Catholicism against the obstinate perfidy of the Jews of that time as proved by excerpts from the Talmud. There are thirteen other cities mentioned by Zunz, in which the first book printed in any language was Hebrew. The first book printed in Portugal bearing the date was the "Nachmanides"—a sufficient proof of the importance of Hebrew in the history of printing.—Bnai Brith Messenger.

DRAMATIC CLUB

The weekly meeting of the Literary and Dramatic Club of Young Judaea was held in the Talmud Torah, Miss Lachovitz occupying the chair. The secretary, Miss Sara Cashofsky, was appointed chairman of a committee to obtain a detailed report of all expenditures entailed and monies to be received at the Chanukah concert, December 19. Miss B. Fleaher read a paper on "Zionism," by Samuel Roth.

CHANGE OF HEART AMONG ARABS

The Felestin, the official organ of the Palestine Arab Committee, and the most bitter opponent of the Balfour Declaration, came out with an article urging co-operation between Arabs and Jews in the upbuilding of Palestine. It proceeds to say that by refusing to recognize the Balfour Declaration the Arabs have been working against their own interests. This article is regarded as a definite indication that the Arab Executive has determined to abandon its policy of opposition and to adopt the principle of co-operation with the Jews, which may inaugurate a new era in the development of Palestine. There are also evidences of serious cleavage in the ranks of the Arab party, as has become public through the controversies between the Felestin and the Al Carmel, the two papers which represent the two tendencies in the Arab Party.

A Workmen's Compensation law was promulgated by the Palestine Government, which makes an employer liable to the payment of £1250 in case of a working man's death and to the payment of a maximum of 150 piastres a week during the period of illness.

TWINS CELEBRATE BAR-MITZVAH AND BIRTH-DAY

Mrs. Celia Kirshenbaum, 118 D'Arcy Street, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of her son, Abie, and his twin sister, Minnie, Saturday, November 20, at the Chevra Bnai Moishe. Abie read a chapter from the Torah. Sunday evening, Mrs. Kirshenbaum entertained 250 guests at a dinner and dance at Beth Jacob Synagogue, Henry Street. In their speeches the confirmant and his sister expressed their gratitude to their mother, who, it is alleged, was deserted a month before the birth of the children. The children also said that they have never met their father, although he is a resident of Toronto. Mrs. Kirshenbaum gave her son a diamond pin and her daughter a diamond ring.

WEDDINGS

Dukoff—Arons

The marriage of Miss Mary Arons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Arons, formerly of Toronto, to Aaron H. Dukoff, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Rabbi A. Roth officiating. A choir of six boys accompanied the rabbi, one of whom sang "O Promise Me."

The bride, who was given away by her father and mother, was in a gown of white georgette trimmed with rhinestones. Her veil, which was in Russian cap effect, was trimmed with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Matilda Arons, sister of the bride, was maid of honour. She wore a gown of orchid georgette and carried deep pink roses. The matron of honour was Mrs. R. Arons, who wore a powder blue georgette gown. The bridesmaids were Miss Syd Wortzman, wearing a flesh georgette gown; Miss Ida Swartz, in a gown of pale blue taffeta, period style, with a shoulder corsage of roses; Miss Jeanne Schwartz, maize chiffon gown. All carried bouquets of roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaids were each presented with a string of pearls, gifts of the groom. The best man was Albert Hoffman, of Brooklyn, N.Y. Groomsmen were Mac Arons, of Toronto; Murray Warshaw and George Gordon, both of Brooklyn, N.Y.

The bride's mother worn a gown of black georgette and sequins, with a corsage of orchids. One hundred and fifty guests sat down to a five-course dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Dukoff left at midnight for Providence, R.I., and will also visit Webster and Boston, Mass. The bride's going-away dress was of brown canton. She wore a brown sport coat, shoes and hat to match. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy, 1926. The out-of-town guests were: Miss Ida Swartz, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. L. Hoffer, of Norfolk, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Dukoff, of Providence, R.I.; Mr. and Mrs. Krasnoff, of Webster, Mass.; Dr. and Mrs. Poselle, of Boston, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Shenker, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Waldovsky-Weisberg

Miss Esther Weisberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Weisberg, Euclid Avenue, and Phillip Waldovsky were married Sunday, November 14, at Shaw Street Synagogue. Rabbi Berger performed the ceremony, assisted by Cantor Glick. Dinner was served to immediate relatives and friends at the Labour Lyceum. The bride was given in marriage by her mother and father, and wore white satin, trimmed with pearls and beads. Her veil of Chantilly lace was caught in coronet fashion and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honour, Miss Celia Weisberg, sister of the bride, wore rose georgette, trimmed with silver beads, and carried American Beauty roses. The bride was attended by Reta Waldovsky, who wore blue georgette, and Miss Rhea Waldovsky, in peach georgette; both carried baskets of Ophelia roses. The flower girls, Essie Weisberg, sister of the bride, and Alice Waldovsky, niece of the groom, carried baskets of autumn flowers. The ring-bearer was Hyman Berlick, cousin of the bride. The bridegroom was attended by A. Yasny as best man. Groomsmen were Leo Jacobson and Dave Goodman. Mrs. Weisberg, mother of the bride, wore black satin and cut velvet. The groom's mother was in black and rose georgette. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. Steinberg and daughters, Fay and Edith, Detroit, Mich; Miss Celia Skuofsky, Newark, N.J.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Geller and son, Nathan, Detroit. After a wedding trip through the West, Mr. and Mrs. Waldovsky will live in Toronto.

Goldstein—Clayman

The wedding was solemnized Sunday, of Miss Sophia Clayman, of Leeds, England, and Samuel Goldstein, of Charlton, Ontario. The ceremony was performed at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. B. Atkins, 368 Berkeley Street, Toronto, Rabbi Isserman officiating. A reception was held at the home of the groom's brother, Walter Goldstein, 62 Bellevue Avenue. The tables were laid for fifty guests. The bride wore a gown of white crepe de chine and veil belonging to her grandmother. She was attended by her aunt, Mrs. M. Lubelle, of Rochester, N.Y. The couple will live at Charlton, Ontario.

LOEW'S

Metro-Goldwyn have executed a master stroke in giving to the motion picture public their first western romance, "War Paint."

This sensational production comes to Loew's Theatre next week.

Col. Tim McCoy was picked from a wealthy ranch in Wyoming to be starred in this remarkable feature. No screen star here, but a gentleman rancher, graduate soldier, out-of-doors man and athlete. A wonderfully handsome man of magnificent physique who typifies the best in American manhood. Col. Tim McCoy is a fearless rider and competent through actual experience in the army to deal with the Red Man.

Pauline Starke is the girl in the case, and Karl Dane has a fascinating role as Petersen.

"War Paint" is the story of a feud between a cruel, treacherous Indian Chief and the command of the army fort which is situated in the centre of the unfriendly Indian community.

Harry Rose, "The Broadway Jester," heads five big acts of vaudeville.

STANDARD THEATRE

The Hollander Troupe will this weekend produce a new comedy drama of New York life, "Where Is Humanity?" Suspense, interests, comedy, song and dance will be outstanding features of this play. Isidore and Hannah Hollander will play the leading parts supported by the entire cast.

Confidence--the Keynote of Success

The knowledge that one is properly dressed creates that confidence which characterizes a successful man.

Collars that feel like a caress. The Van-Dusen and semi-soft made to rival the best starched collar.

Shirts that fit correctly. No bulging at neck or bosom. Cuffs turned evenly, and when necessary taken off and reversed.

Socks and Woollens with that soft, velvety feeling so much desired and only possible when a soap like "Ivory" is used.

Repairs—Every article the man wears kept in first-class condition, not merely "mending free."

Palestine as Home of Jews is Scored; Jews Reply

The colonization of Palestine by Jews is "unfortunate and visionary," Dr. Henry S. Pritchett says in a report to the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Dr. Pritchett is a trustee of the endowment, and at the request of its president, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, he visited Egypt, Palestine and Greece and studied "the widespread unrest in the Mohammedan world." The report will appear in International Conciliation, official publication of the endowment.

Referring in his report to the movement to make of Palestine "the national home of the Jews," Dr. Pritchett says:

"The very expression is irritating to the Arabs, who demand to know, and with some reason, what is to become of them if Palestine is to be made a national home for the Jews. The Zionist movement to colonize Palestine with Jews from other parts of the world and to make of it, in language of the mandate, a National Jewish Home, appeared to me an unfortunate and visionary effort.

"One can readily understand the sentiment which animates a great number of the Jewish race in their desire to reoccupy a country that was for a thousand years the home of their people and the seat of their great influence upon the religious life of the world. As a practical effort, however, the plan seems to have almost nothing to commend it and to involve in its execution results that cannot fail to be unfortunate.

"If Palestine could be cleared of the Arabs and populated with Jews exclusively and thus become a pure Jewish state, no thoughtful man could doubt that this would be an unfortunate situation for those Jews who lived in Palestine. The segregation of any national group by itself has seldom failed to develop a type of personality and national character that was aggressive, egotistic and without capacity for co-operation with the rest of the world.

"No greater misfortune can come to a people or to a nation than to cherish the illusion that it is a chosen people and enjoys the favour of the Almighty beyond all other peoples. That this tendency would be accentuated by a Jewish occupation of Palestine seems unquestionable."

One incident Dr. Pritchett cites to illustrate this situation is a disagreement between Jews and Mohammedans with respect to what is known as "the Wailing Wall of the Jews." Jews have gone to the wall to bewail bygone glories of Judaea. The Mohammedans, Dr. Pritchett says, recently claimed Jewish wailers outstepped limits assigned to them by establishing on Mohammedan territory benches upon which to rest "while they lamented the departed glories of their race." The benches were removed by British police to prevent rioting.

New York leaders of Zionist and Jewish movements raised their voices in disagreement with the report of Dr. Henry S. Pritchett.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of Free Synagogue, long associated with the Zionist movements and now honourary chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, called Dr. Pritchett's report "the opening gun in a battle against Zionism."

"The Pritchett report is not so much a report as a repercussion of the loose generalizations that can be heard from the lips of any Arab politician, absentee Syrian landlord or Mohammedan renegade," Dr. Wise said. "If I were not assured that Dr. Pritchett had just visited Palestine I would be led to believe from the tenor of his so-called report that he has quoted from the files of Arab newspapers of 1918 and 1919, before Great Britain had become the mandatory power for the League of Nations."

Dr. Wise said that, while he had not yet been able to read the full text of Dr. Pritchett's report, he felt that what he knew of it demanded immediate attention. Answering the charge that "the Jews are seeking to displace the Arabs and are unconcerned with respect to their interests," Dr. Wise calls attention to "enormous prices" paid to Arab landlords for their property. He credits the Jews with bringing "new standards of life to Arab, Christian and Jew by transforming waste places and denuded hillsides into richly flourishing settlements."

"One charge of Dr. Pritchett is wholly true," Dr. Wise continued. "Zionism is a visionary plan, as were the purposes of the Pilgrim Fathers."

Following a perusal of the Pritchett report, Samuel Untermyer, well-known lawyer and president of the Keren Hayesod, or Palestine Foundation, issued a statement saying, "I cannot agree with Dr. Wise's pessimistic prediction that Dr. Pritchett's statement is the opening shot in a great battle or any other kind of a battle against Zionism. The Palestinian movement has lived and thrived on these spasmodic attacks. The movement is too big and too firmly grounded in the affections of the Jews of the world to be influenced by this form of 'sharpshooting' over the lines."

RABBI DROPS DEAD IN A WINDSOR STORE

Rabbi Cominsky, of 427 Aylmer Avenue, for twelve years head of the Jewish Synagogue in the Border Cities, dropped dead in the Dominion Store at the corner of Wyandotte Street and Glengarry Avenue to-day. Heart failure is given as the cause of death. Apparently in good health, the rabbi entered the store and gave his order about 1 o'clock to-day. The clerk, who was in attendance, turned about to fill the order, but as he did so, Rabbi Cominsky collapsed. Medical aid was summoned, but was of no avail. It is believed that death was instantaneous. Deceased is survived by a widow and seven children.

PALESTINE LAND SURVEY TO BE MADE

A step forward in the direction of carrying out the land survey in Palestine, and the proper registration of land titles which is necessary before the Government can proceed to the effecting of Article 6 in the Palestine Mandate providing for the close settlement of Jews on State Lands and Waste Lands has been made with the appointment officially announced of Sir Ernest Dowson, late Financial Adviser and Surveyor-General to the Egyptian Government as Commissioner of Lands in Palestine.
